linson Hall To-Day.

The sixth annual exhibition of the Indiana Poultry Association will open in Tomlinson Hall this morning. Owing to the excessive cold of the past two days much of the stock has been delayed on the road, and the opening was necessarily postponed from last night until to-day. Bustling activity in and about the quarters has marked the preparation for the past few days. so perfect are all arrangements for the coming exhibit that indications point to the most successful meeting the association has ever held. Already poultry of high class has arrived from this State and also from Illinois, and a heavy installment of birds is looked for to-day. One of the principal exhibitors now on hand is J. B. Clark, of Chicago. who is showing a number of varieties of blooded chicks. The pigeon and pet stock departments have been given positions on the stage of the hall, and many rabbits, rats, squirrels and other small animals were brought in yesterday. By this morning everything will be in readiness for the opening, and it is expected that the first day will be the interesting one. The

A Very Unusual Occurrence. As Mr. J. H. Wilson, of No. 130 West Ohio street, was on his way home Wednesday night about 10 o'clock, a horse with bells and parts of a harness passed him at a rapid gait, going toward South Mississippi street. He made a grab for what he thought was the reins, but was somewhat startled to find that he had seized the entrails of the animal, a piece of which was left in his hands. The horse had evidently been pierced by a shaft.

GRAY ONCE MORE SHUT OUT

Turpie Renominated for the Senate By the Democratic Joint Caucus.

Past History of Isaac Pusey's Efforts to Ge There-Resolution Complimenting Governor Chase's Message.

Senator David Turpie was nominated for the United States Senate, last night, by the Democratic caucus of the General Assembly in the House chamber. Thirty-five senatorial votes were cast for him. The House cast sixty-two votes for Senator Turple and one vote for John Gilbert Shanklin, of Evansville, the Shanklin ballot being cast by Representative Francis

M. Hord, of Marion. The caucus met at 7:30 with closed doors and was called to order by Representative Richard Irwin, of Adams county. Senator Ellison, of Lawrence county, was made permanent chairman and George I. Mc-Intyre, of Floyd. secretary. The doors were then thrown open and the trouble began. To any person who has ever witnessed the eloquent powow of a Democratic legislative caucus the trouble referred to will be appreciated. Senator John W Kern, of Marion, was the first one to secure attention of Chairman Ellison, with a few apologies and a choice selection of encomiums nominated Senator David Turple. Then followed in the wake of the Indianapolis lawyer a motley procession of seconds not very full of anything but Mr. Turpie. Senator Hol-comb, of Posey, observed Senator Turpie's work in southern Indiana up to a very late date. Senator Volney Bingham, of St. Joseph, said his life of Democracy dated from the day Senator Turpie first led a forlorn hope in this State. He therefore seconded the nomination of Mr. Turpie. The enthusiasm for Turpie was of that mild, flat, pre-ordained, coercive kind that does not bubble. The expressions were of the perfunctory ring, fully subservient and full of subordinate duty. There was very little applause, as the speeches were not of the inspiring kind. It was at this time that Representative Hord, of Marion, a man too young to yet know the full import of bossism, arose from his seat with sufficient courage to be independent, and placed in nomination the name of J. G. Shanklin, of Evansville. An expression of half-suppressed applause rippled over the large assemblage after Mr. Hord had concluded his nominating speech, which was as follows: "Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Caucus-I wish to arise and enter my most solemu protest against what I believe will be your decision this evening in the mat-ter of the election of a United States Sena-tor. With all due respect to your opinion. I believe the election of Mr. Turpie will be in line with the spirit of Bourbonism and reaction. I favor the new Democracy, the Democracy of Grover Cleveland, progress, advance and reform. I know that in the vote which I shall cast to-night I may sound my political death knell and wind up my political career, but in the court where my conscience sits as judge I stand acquitted. Gentlemen, I wish to present the name of the grandest, ablest and most loyal Democrat in Indiana; one who has served his party well without regard to self-aggrandizement, emolument or reward; one who has sacrificed his political aspirations and possibilities upon the altar of party's honor and success.

"I wish to present to this caucus the name of a man who is a gentleman, scholar, bonest man, statesman - John Gilbert

Among others who seconded the nomination of Senator Turple in meek tones were Representative Barnes, of Clark, and Repersentative Hench, of Allen, who desired to be called a "Bourbon" or any other vile name ever worn by Senator Turpie. Rep-resentative Fippen, of Tipton, made a lengthy speech which through and through showed little else than the lowest political cowardice. Mr. Fippen apologized for having to vote for Turpie, giving Mr. Shanklin the precedence as an orator, as a man of brains and as a Democrat, yet bending to the rod with a service kiss for Turpie. Dr. Montoux, from Vanderburg, joined the Shanklin brigade, and when he said that the eminent Irishman deserved all honor for having sacrificed the nomination for Governor to the interests of the transcendent Grover Cleveland the greatest Democrat on the pay-roll, every man in the caucus excavated his fists from his pockets and almost hammered them into marmalade. The aged Doctor, however, in his enthusiasm for Shanklin remembered suddenly how easily he made $6 a day, and seconded the nomination of Turpie. Senators Kopelke, of Lake, and McDonald, of Noble, also seconded Turple. The vote when cast was as before mentioned. Senator Kern and Representative Behymer were selected to carry to Mr. Turple the result.

Senator Griffith, in the meantime, offered a resolution thanking ex-Governor Chase for his indorsement of the Democratic administration in the State during his term of office, as expressed in his message. Sen-ater Magee amended by adding that a copy be sent the ex-Governor, who lives in Danville. This movement created some little merriment, and the resolution was passed. Senator Turpie walked to the rostrum

"Gentlemen of the General Assembly-Allow me to return my sincere thanks for the great honor you have this night conferred upon me. I am profoundly grateful for your token of confidence."

Mr. Turple assured his constituents that he would discharge his duties faithfully. The new administration would be almost entirely Democratic. The issues on which they had won would not sleep; they might be delayed, but would ultimately succeed. The issues had been free farms, free commerce and free ballots. The caucus then adjourned.

Gray's friends were in attendance upon the caucus in force, last night, and it was thought that they might try to put through, in the general good feeling, that resolution favoring Isaac Pusey for the Cabinet, but they did not. "What is there in Turple that gives him such clear sailing for re-election?" was asked of one of his most active supporters, who was known last spring as a rampant

Cleveland wire-pulser.

"Not a thing," he replied, "not a thing. A wooden man would do just as well, but he was in and was the most convenient man to keep Gray out. Gray has been wanting the senatorship for years. He had it all fixed when he was Governor, and had all but fourteen of the votes in caucus pledged. Then we succeeded in keeping him out by having Cleveland appoint Matson, his Lieutenant-governor, as internal revenue collector and leaving a vacancy in the succession so that he couldn't get away. But he made a queer move to beat that scheme by having Hord, his Attorneygeneral, write an opinion that the vacancy could be filled at the next election, in 1886. But as luck would have it Robertson, a Republican, was elected, and the Democratic party repudiated Hord's opinion and Green Smith clung to the Chair of the Senate. Thus arose the most famous row in Indiana's political history. "Gray wanted it two years ago, and did so much work, in a quiet way, that Voor-hees became alarmed. I know some of Voorhees's friends went from here to Fort Wayne to head off the nomination of a couple of Gray men there. Then Jim Rice and John Lamb brought Gray and Voor-hees together at Terre Haute, and they stuffed him so full of presidential ambition that he let go of the senatorial fight. When Voorhees hustled for Gray last summer he was only fulfilling the promises then made." Ordered the Bonds Paid.

The County Commissioners made the following order yesterday: Ordered by the Board of County Commissioners that the time warrants calling for the sum of $70,000, issued on the 15th of January, 1892, and due in one year, payable to Victor M. Backus, or bearer, be called in and paid by the treasurer of Marion county out of the proper funds now in his hands as such treasurer.

The $70,000 is the money borrowed to pay a judgment obtained against the county some five years ago by the Indianapolis, Decatur & Springfield railroad.

Blooming-dale; executive committee, Calvin Stardi-vant, Noblesville; S. C. Roush, Warren; Edward Morris, Indianapolis. A pleasant feature of the closing work of the association was the presentation to Mr. Sturdivant, the retiring secretary, of a fine hat and pair of gloves. The gifts were tendered by the society as a token of the appreciation entertained by the members for his efficient services and for what he has accomplished during his three consecutive years of office.

BENEFICENT WOOL TARIFF

The Indiana Wool-Growers' Association Oppose Wool on the Free List.

President Howland Gives Some Facts Which Come from Practical Experience-Papers by Wool-Growers-Message to Mr. Merritt.

The seventeenth annual meeting of Indiana wool-growers was called to order at 1:30 o'clock yesterday by the president, Hon. C. A. Howland, of Marion county. Seventy-five members of the association were present and took unusually active interest in the subjects which came up for consideration. The present session is considered of more than usual importance to the members, as it involves many questions in connection with the tariff. In the address by the president there was embodied not only a general synopsis of the condition of business the past year, but also a few stern facts relative to the peril that menaces Indiana wool-growers, should the tax be removed. President Howland stated that he now addressed the men before him as wool-growers, but the signs of the times indicate that, in the near future, they would be merely "mutton raisers," a more appropriate name, he said, for those engaged in sheep interests. Important subjets to be considered are "how shall we make the best crosses, in order that the desired type be attained;" also, "what breed of sheep is most desirable for mutton, when wool is no longer a consideration." It is estimated that $250,000,000 is invested in sheep husbandry in the United States, and gives employment to no less than $00,000 of our citizens. Surely, continued Mr. Howland, so great an industry as this should receive as much consideration from our government as is shown the manufacturers of woolens, who have not as much capital invested. Would it not be wisdom on the part of the government to keep the tax on wool, and thereby assist in raising the necessary revenues? It is devoutly hoped, he said, that the present duty will be allowed to remain on wool. There is little the farmer produces except wool, on which revenue can be raised, and all stock men should petition Congress not to disturb so great an interest as sheep husbandry by removing any portion of the present tariff.

Secretary Robe, of Greencastle, read the following letter of regrets from George Merritt, of this city, who is in New York attending the national meeting of wool manufacturers:

C. A. Howland, President Indiana Wool-Growers: Dear Sir-I regret very much my inability to be present at your annual meeting. The association has always taken the broad ground of protection to every American industry, and I hope and believe that the members will continue to stand firm, shoulder to shoulder with the farmers of the country in opposition to any change in the wool schedule of our present tariff, under which sheep raising and wool importing have both prospered. The McKinley tariff should be allowed a fair trial. Our watch-word should be: "Let well enough alone." I believe there is a fighting chance to prevent any change in the tariff for the next two years. I can't believe any party desires to want the ruin of so large a class of our citizens as would be affected by such a change as is proposed in the woolen schedule. I hope you will give the industry such an impetus that the next five years will show a marked increase. Yours truly, GEO. MERRITT.

Mr. Merritt's communication created much earnest discussion, and the association demonstrated the fact that it was thoroughly alive to the situation. As to the letter read, a committee was at once appointed to report upon it. The following resolution was framed and ordered forwarded by wire to the National Association of Wool Manufacturers:

Mr. George Merritt, Fifth-avenue Hotel, New York The Wool-growers' Association of Indiana sends greeting to the National Association of Wool Manufacturers, pledging our unchanging devotion to the production of wool and the manufacturers of woolens. The present law is working well, Let well enough alone. C. A. HOWLAND,

The unsettled state which characterized the meeting was in no way abated when the secretary displayed to view a sample of wool grown in Australia, and sent to the association by Edward Green, of Philadelphia, chairman of the wool department of the world's fair. The specimen was carefully examined by experts in attendance, who were forced to the decision that the article was in all classes a most formidable competitor to the American growth.

The first paper of the afternoon was read was: "How Can the Interest in Sheep Industry be Aroused in Indiana?" The essay dealt with wool statistics, ably edited. He said that the present amount of wool pro-duced was two pounds per capita to popu-lation. The United States produces only half the amount needed in the county, all the rest being imported. There is no reason why we should not furnish the whole

"Is it Best to Breed Ram and Ewe Lambs?" was discussed by Eli B. Hessler, of Warsaw. He thought it would not be wisdom and good judgment to do so. W. W. White, a young stock man of Franklin, offered some valuable advice in his paper, "Obstacles to be Overcome by Peginners." He believed that the paramount principle that should actuate the young beginner was to commence properly and not despise the small details. The session closed with the appointment of committees. The committee on programme committees. The committee on programme for next year was composed of Messrs. John F. Thompson, of Marion: J. M. Harshburger, of Ladogs, and Marion Williams, of Muncip. The committee on expert judges will be Messrs. Marion Williams, L. B. Skinner, of Denver, Ind., and Uriah Pruitt, of Greensburg. A committee to whom will be intrusted the duty of securing an appropriation from the Legisleture for the world's fair premiums on Indiana wool was appointed as follows: W. diana wool was appointed as follows: W. W. White, of Franklin; John L. Thompson, of Marion, and Hiram Howland, of Indianapolis. The committee will act in conjunction with the committee appointed by the swine-breeders. The wool-growers will convene again at 8:30 this morning.

NATURAL GAS A BADMASTER

Rough Notes Prints Some Matter of Interest Concerning Fire Losses.

Incendiaries Partly Responsible, but Carelessness Bears the Larger Share of the Burden-Some Legislation Needed.

The current number of Rough Notes contains an article upon one phase of the use of natural gas, to which one ordinarily gives hardly a thought. The business community, however, has been made to appreciate the fact that the insurance companies are disturbed by the heavy losses from fires which they have to make good. Concerning the subject, the article says:

The conditions attendant upon the use of natural gas are appailing when unfolded to the practical eye of the fire underwriter, accounting as they do, for the dead loss in-surance companies have been sustaining ever since they have been accepting natural-gas risks in this field. The two prime causes of loss to companies operating here are: First, carelessness; and, second, incendiarism. The carelessness consists largely in the use of jumbo and flambeau burners without automatic cut-offs in factories, and the use of excessive quantities of the fuel both in factories and in

The average consumer of natural gas, be he farmer, merchant or manufacturer, 18, 26 a general rule, wasteful of it, owing largely to the fact that it it so mexpensive. Excessive consumption is of itself evidence of carelessness, and it is safe to say that fully five times as much natural gas is wasted in the territory where it is produced as is required for the use and comfort of consumers. Regarding incendiarism, it is estimated by those best qualified to judge, and who are conservatively inclined, that fully 25 to 30 per cent. of the lesses come from this source. There is sufficient cause to believe this estimate low enough. * * * Wherever the gas pressure is properly regulated, as it should be by ordinance in all cities and towns using natural gas, it is not only the safest of fuels, as it is the cleanest, but its use should be a source of profit to fire underwriters. The Legislature, during the present session, will be compelled to pass some stautory regulafuel out of the State, but restricting its use within, or in a very few years natural gas will cease contributing to the people's welfare, and fire insurance companies will no longer regard it as a source of unmixed evil to them. This, however, after it is no more. That the companies have a right to so regard the use of natural gas, in the region where it abounds, and have good reasons for withdrawing therefrom, is shown by the following carefully-prepared receipts and losses for the past year at the principal points in the natural-gas belt of $358,000 Total premiums and losses $218,000 Those who doubt the accuracy of the figures in the column of "losses" will be inclined to regard them as too conservative, when we recall to them the losses at Anderson on the tin-plate-mill, $10,000; hardware factory, $7,500; dwellings, $5,000; brick-works, $5,000, and mercantile risks, $2,500. Marion, special hazards, $5,000; dwellings, $3,000. Muncie, nail-mill, $20,-000; glass factory, $65,000; wagon-works, $10,500; iron-works, $7,500; churches, $2,500, and dwellings, $2,500. Portland, mercantile risks, $7,000; special hazards, $10,000, and dwellings, $3,000. Alexandria, mercantile risks, $30,000; Rideville, school-house, $5,-000; Dalesville and Yorktown, brick-works, $3,000. Noblesville dwellings, $3,000; and $3,000. Noblesville, dwellings, $3,000; and Dunkirk, mercantile risks, $45,000. Hartford City, paper-mill, $60,000; brick-works, $5,000; dwellings, $3,000.

The cities and towns embraced in the above table are all within the gas region proper, and none of them have their fuel piped to them, and the losses reported were caused by the use of natural gas. Were we to include all the towns within piping distance of the gas field, using gas for fuel, the losses would be increased by several hundred thousand dollars, to which increases and increases a light several to the losses would be found a liberature and increase and increases a light several to the losses would be found a liberature and increases and incr crease Indianapolis would be found a liberal contributor. Strangely enough the insurance compa-nies have sustained their misfortunes in this region with remarkable equanimity, they having apparently manifested more resignation over their recent severe losses here than they formerly exhibited over the coal oil and gasoline losses that have not wrought one-fourth the destruction that natural gas has during the same period in this locality.

It is evident that fire underwriters have been looking hopefully upon the astonishing increase of wealth and development of resources in this region, though contributing reluctantly their full share towards its present prosperity, expecting and be-lieving that the time must be near at hand when State and municipal authorities will when State and municipal authorities will unite in terminating present methods of using natural gas, and that the adoption of safe and more perfect devices for removing the dangers menacing both life and property must soon follow.

To this end the present Legislature should direct its efforts, as only by lessening the ratio of losses to amount of property insured can the premium rates be reduced and the heavy burden of the fire tax upon the people of the State be diminished.

The Indiana Florists' Society Decide to Show Chrysanthemums in November.

A dozen prominent florists of the State met at the Denison Hotel last night and discussed with the representatives of horticulture in this city the advisability of holding a chryeanthemum show next winter. Five letters from different florists over the State who were unable attend were read, offering much encouragement and volunteering substantial assistance. The matter was discussed thoroughly by those present, and it was finally decided to give the show again next fall. but to limit the expense of the entertainment to $2,500, and place the amount to be offered in premiums at $1,000. Several changes were made in the departments, especially those of seed-lings, roses and carnations. On ac-count of the variety of these latter varieties and the unseasonable time for the exhibit a special premium will be arranged for. After the transaction of some minor affairs the following committee on arrangements and dates was appointed: Messrs. Hill, of Richmond; Hunt, of Terre Haute; Coens, of Kokomo; Darner, of Lafayette, and Bertermann and Rieman, of the city. The committee will meet this morning for the purpose of taking steps to-ward the preparation of a premium list,
